

Bookmarks

Do you have favorite Web sites that you return to time and again? How about sharing them with the rest of us? Send us your most useful or entertaining Web addresses, with a little note explaining why you like them, to computerlink@uniontrib.com, and we'll share them with our readers. Be sure to put "bookmarks" in the subject line.

FOR ALL INTERESTS

<http://www.miningco.com>

"I've bookmarked this site as a great source for both general and specific information on hundreds of topics. It's well organized so you can easily find and progress through an area of interest. They say, 'A Site for Every Topic, An Expert Guide for Every Site.' I think they're right!"

alohaihu@pbachell.net

VEGAS OR BUST

<http://www.vegasstrip.com/stripmap.htm>

"Do you go to Las Vegas? Want to find info on hotels on the strip? Here you'll find a great map overlay of the Las Vegas Strip. From the Luxor on the south end to the Stratosphere at the north. Every hotel name is a link to its own Web site, most of which are great sites if only to browse. Just click on the name of the hotel."

RALPH LUSSENDEN

cleansweep@home.com

SOUNDS OF ANIMALS

<http://www.georgetown.edu/cball/animals/swedish.html>

Provides translations into numerous languages of the noises animals make. In Afrikaans, for example, bees go "zoem-zoem," while in Korean, they go "boong-boong." A must for the globetrotting animal enthusiast.

New York Times News Service

AMERICAN HISTORY

<http://www.tamu-commerce.edu/coas/history/sarantakes/stuff.html>

"U.S. Diplomatic History Resources Index" is a guide to online information about American foreign policy past and present that all with any interest in the subject matter will find useful and appreciate.

"If you are wondering why a professor in Texas is writing, I am a native of California, and got my Ph.D. at USC, where this site was originally located."

NICK SARANTAKES

Nick_Sarantakes@

tamu-commerce.edu

Texas A&M

ANIMATED EXPERIENCE

<http://www.ac.wvu.edu/~stephan/>

"Ed Stephan's Front Door" is "one of the most extensive and fun-filled sites I've found, with a wide variety of interests from maps to movies to cartoons to Greek history to opera, to mention a few. The animation project is outstanding!"

stardust22@earthlink.net